Brezhnev Warns U.S. and China in 'Hot-Points' Talk

By James Goldborough
Oct. 27 (REUTERS)—Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev criticized the United States and China for trying to bring Vietnam war "behind the backs of the Vietnamese people."

Mr. Brezhnev, in a toast at a dinner he gave for President Georges Pompidou and his wife, said that the two countries sign a cooperation pact and a $22 billion contract for the construction of a steel mill in Vietnam.

Using the forum of his first visit to a Western country and his reception here as a head of state, Mr. Brezhnev went on to call for an end to foreign intervention in Indo-Chinese affairs.

Mr. Brezhnev also spoke of the Franco-Soviet "concertation" in the Middle East and said that it was the Big Four who could bring a peaceful solution to the conflict.

Children Reportedly Fire on Troops

BELFAST, Oct. 27 (UPI)—Gunmen killed a police sergeant and seriously wounded a police constable tonight after bomb attacks killed two British soldiers earlier in the day, the army said.

The fatal shootings followed only hours after bombing and shooting attacks on a police station and the homes of policemen.

The outlaws Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Londonderry army observation post in which two soldiers died.

The police sergeant and constable were lured into an ambush by a telephone call to police which reported a barn was on fire north of Lough Neagh Lake.

As the two officers got out of their car at the scene, a hail of bullets cut them down. The sergeant died instantly.

The constable, blood streaming from his wounds, managed to crawl back to the car and radio for help before lapsing into unconsciousness, the army said.

Troops and police swarmed into the area, sealed it off and began a search for the attackers.

Earlier, an angry army officer warned that soldiers will no longer hold their fire against children attacking them with guns, no matter how young the children.

"If children continue to fire guns at soldiers they will be shot," Maj. Peter Johnson of the Scots Guards said.

Two youths of ages estimated between 12 and 14 fired on him and his troops in a Land Rover in Belfast last night, he said.

"We did not fire at them because they were such small children, but if we had wanted to we could have shot them dead," he said.

Black Berets Warn He said the youths were wearing black berets—the official cap of the Irish Republican Army—and were carrying submachine guns.

Cpl. James Harkins, who was on sentry duty outside the police station, saw the youths firing at the Land Rover.

"I was so amazed I was incapable of opening fire," he said. Army spokesmen termed "an agonizing problem" the use of children as gunmen.

The British have claimed previously that children threw nails under their vehicles.

"We Have No Choice" "In the past we have not fired at small children," Maj. Johnson said. "But now we have no choice. Parents who allow their children to be used in this fashion must be insane."

Nixon Assails Conduct In UN Over China Vote

By Fred Farris
WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (REUTERS)—In a blistering statement, the White House today expressed President Nixon's shock and dismay at what he felt was "personal animosity" shown toward the United States by some delegates at the United Nations when it voted Monday night to expel Nationalist China.

Clearly speaking for the President, Press Secretary Ron Ziegler said U.S. support for the UN and for foreign aid could be adversely affected by "the cheering, the clapping, the undignified actions" of some delegates.

These actions followed the vote both on the U.S.-sponsored motion to declare the ouster of Taiwan "an important question" requiring a two-thirds majority vote.

The administration's foreign aid bill already is in trouble in Congress and the American defeat in the UN is bolstering new cries to slash aid both to individual countries and to the UN.

Rogers in Senate Secretary of State William P. Rogers cautioned the Senate today against punitive or retaliatory action against the UN, but urged a financial review by the UN to see how it can pay its bills.

The secretary also told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee not to expect too rapid an improvement in U.S. relations with Peking.

Responding to questions after a breakfast conference with President Nixon and Henry A. Kissinger, who returned from Peking yesterday after arranging the President's forthcoming trip, Mr. Rogers said the President "doesn't want us to be too euphoric."

Mr. Nixon's visit to Peking will take place after Jan. 1, and an announcement of a firm date will be made around Dec. 1, it became known today.

President Nixon, who yesterday let Secretary Rogers express the administration's reaction at a news conference, was said by Mr. Ziegler today to be "shocked by this action" of certain delegates.

Violence erupted in Belfast today when mourners, mostly women, hurled stones, bricks and umbrellas at soldiers during the funeral of Martin Fursyde, 19, identified by newspapers as an area leader of the IRA.

Soldiers in four armored vehicles near the Fursyde family home went into action when a man wearing the black beret of the IRA, standing by the coffin, fired a salute shot into the air.

Mr. Ziegler said that "it is not our intention to retaliate" but he stressed the administration's fear that the clapping and cheering at America's defeat, from delegates of countries to which "this country has been very generous" in foreign aid, "could also be translated into a deterioration of that support."

He added that the White House had received a number of phone calls and telegrams expressing shock and dismay. He said the number was quite large but declined to give figures.

Vice-President Agnew, meantime, told the Associated Press in an interview that the UN had become a "propaganda sounding board for the left," but that the U.S. should continue its membership.

He added: "My judgment is that we will move away from assigning a position of predominant importance to that body until such time as there is a more even balance and fairness exhibited by the member nations."

Mr. Rogers said at his news conference yesterday that there would be "some deterioration in [public] support" for the UN in the United States because of Taiwan's expulsion. U.S. policy sought the admission of mainland China to the UN but the retention of Nationalist China's seat in the General Assembly.

Mr. Rogers appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today to discuss the UN vote. He said that the UN had become a "propaganda sounding board for the left," but that the U.S. should continue its membership.

Thanet Requests Peking Pick Delegate at Once

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 27 (Reuters)—UN Secretary-General U Thant today urged Peking to hurry its appointment of a representative amid speculation that China could take over leadership of the Security Council on Sunday night.

In his second cable to the Chinese Foreign Ministry since Monday night, when the General Assembly decided to seat the People's Republic and expel Taiwan, Mr. Thant asked for a swift appointment so that the work of the Security Council might not be interrupted.

He observed that a council member's delegate must present his credentials not less than 24 hours before taking his seat.

The President's trip to China and, if the Chinese decide to be known in the UN as the People's Republic of China, it would go to them. Otherwise, Poland will succeed Nicaragua under the system of alphabetical rotation.

Mr. Thant cited the article of the Charter which states that each member of the 15-nation council shall be "represented at all times at the seat of the organization" so that it may be able to function continuously.

He said he wanted China to appoint its representative "as soon as possible." China is a permanent member of the council and has the right of veto.

Mr. Kissinger insisted that the timing of his trip—which occurred during the United Nations debate over the admission of Peking and the expulsion of Taiwan and ended just before the final vote—was a coincidence.

He said he did not believe his presence in China had affected a single vote and that he had not discussed the subject with Chinese officials at any time during his visit.

In addition, he said, he did not know any more now than when he left about reports that China had been torn by a mysterious internal power struggle.

Mr. Kissinger, who conferred with Premier Zhou at some length during his six-day visit, said negotiations between the Americans and their Chinese counterparts were divided into two general areas. He said he discussed substantive matters with Mr. Zhou while other members of his party worked on technical arrangements such as security, communications and press coverage.

Congress Urged by Connally To Extend Wage-Price Freeze

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury John E. Connally said today that President Nixon's whole economic strategy could be wrecked if Congress does not extend his authority over wages and prices.

Mr. Connally, addressing the House Banking Committee, was opening the administration's case for legislation covering Phase 2 of the President's economic program, which will take effect when the 90-day wage-price freeze expires on Nov. 13.

Congress is expected to support most of Mr. Nixon's recommendations for continued controls, although there has been resistance to his request for a full year's extension.

"I think it would be a mistake at this time to refuse to extend the act or to extend it for only a few months," Mr. Connally said.

"Although we have the power to put Phase 2 in place, the uncertainties that such action could generate among workers and businessmen about the duration of the program could well result in failure of the whole stabilization effort."

"Our request for one additional year involves no necessary implications for the life of the Phase-2 program," he added.

"That program will be kept in place just long enough to do the job and no longer," Mr. Connally said.

Mr. Connally also sought to head off any effort to write into the Phase 2 legislation a mandate for interest rate ceilings.

Repeating the administration's request for only standby authority over interest and dividends, he said the White House took a calculated risk in not using existing authority to control interest rates.

"It has paid off," he said, noting that interest rates on Treasury borrowings and the prime lending rate of commercial banks have both come down.

"As to dividends," Mr. Connally continued, "the cooperation of business with the voluntary program has been splendid. Again, nothing more than standby authority—which I very much doubt will have to be used—is needed at this time."

Goldberg Denounces Johnson's Memoirs

By Neil Sheehan
WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (NYT)—Arthur J. Goldberg yesterday attacked as false Lyndon B. Johnson's version of how Mr. Goldberg left the Supreme Court to become delegate to the United Nations in 1955.

Mr. Goldberg compared the former President's memoirs to the "newspeak" propaganda of George Orwell's novel "1984."

In an interview in his Washington law office and in a formal statement, the former justice commented with bitterness on Mr. Johnson's account of their relationship.

"The Vantage Point: Perspectives of the Presidency, 1963-1969."

"Nothing could be further from the truth," Mr. Goldberg said of Mr. Johnson's account that Mr. Goldberg had been "bored" with his duties on the Supreme Court.

Mr. Johnson says in his memoirs that Prof. J. Kenneth Galbraith, former ambassador to India, had told him this after the death of Adlai E. Stevenson, whom Mr. Goldberg succeeded at the UN, and that Mr. Goldberg had confirmed Mr. Galbraith's report in a later conversation.

Mr. Goldberg said that it had been "highly inaccurate" of the former President to have stated that he had said anything of the kind.

"It's not the truth," he said. Mr. Goldberg also labeled as "preposterous" a remark in the memoirs that Mr. Goldberg had been restless as secretary of labor.

Reached by telephone in Cambridge, Mass., Prof. Galbraith said, "I would have no quarrel with the word 'bored.'"

He said he could not precisely recall using it but that "I may well have used that word in describing Arthur's state of mind to the President" at the time of Mr. Stevenson's death.

He said he had "urged" Mr. Goldberg's appointment to the UN post.

Several weeks earlier, Mr. Galbraith said, "Arthur" had dropped in to see me and he said there was a great transition going to the court from the active life of a labor lawyer and a cabinet officer. He said that it was a difficult one."

"I could well have interpreted that as boredom," Mr. Galbraith said. "He certainly gave me that impression."

"If there was an error, it was mine" and not Mr. Johnson's.

Mr. Goldberg also proposed that all the memorandums on Vietnam war policy that he wrote as delegate to the UN from July, 1965, to April, 1968, as well as related discussions in the National Security Council, be made public "to set the record straight" on his efforts to de-escalate the war and to begin peace negotiations.

"Americans should not have to derive their information about these events only from the President's self-serving and biased statements in a document which purports to be, but in fact is not, the history of the events which have so profoundly affected all of us," Mr. Goldberg said.

He then urged the publication of his memorandums and the minutes of the National Security Council "to avoid the necessity—now and in the future—for reliance on the Orwellian history contained in the President's memoirs." Mr. Goldberg said he did not possess these records, but that Mr. Johnson had them in his library at the University of Texas.

Italy to Reform Alto Adige Status

ROME, Oct. 27 (UPI)—The Senate tonight voted into law a constitutional reform of the Trentino-Alto Adige regional statute, giving the German-speaking group wide self-government and minority rights.

It was the second reading in the Senate of the reform proposals, already passed in two readings by the Chamber of Deputies. And it made its approval final.

The reform had the previous approval of South Tyrolean leaders and of the Austrian government, which has championed their cause for decades.

Stock Prices Drop in N.Y.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (REUTERS)—New York Stock Exchange prices plummeted today, the Dow Jones industrial average falling 8.88 points to close at 886.38—only 5.81 above its lowest for the year.

The main reason for the decline, the 11th in a row, continues to be investor concern about the U.S. economy. It was reported today that the index of leading economic indicators, which foreshadows broad moves in the economy, fell in September for the third successive month. Details on Page 9.

Balloting in Commons Tonight Laborites Caution Jenkins On Voting to Join the EEC

LONDON, Oct. 27 (Reuters)—Labor party critics of the European Economic Community today gave their deputy leader Roy Jenkins what was interpreted as a second warning against supporting British membership in the EEC in tomorrow's House of Commons vote.

Political observers say the move as another effort to bring home to Mr. Jenkins and his pro-European colleagues the trouble they will face if they support British entry.

Today's vote was on a motion by Mrs. Judith Hart, a former minister and a strong opponent of entering the Common Market.

Mr. Jenkins replied that his decision to vote for entry had never been in doubt.

Mr. Jenkins said he would vote in favor of British entry. This ended days of speculation that he might modify his position.

He also disputed rumors that he would resign as chairman. Mr. Houghton, 73, is a moderate.

As he spoke, the House of Commons went into its fifth day of speeches on the Common Market—the longest debate since World War II.

The House votes tomorrow night on whether Britain should join the six-nation Common Market. Forecasts suggest a Conservative majority for entry.

In the Commons today, Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber attacked the present anti-market position of Labor leader Harold Wilson, who, as prime minister, sought British membership.

Saying that he had great respect for those who had remained consistent to their convictions on this issue, the finance minister declared: "As I have been meeting the ministers of the six over these past months, one after the other had asked me the same question: 'Why is it that Mr. Wilson has changed his mind?'"

'3-Line Whip' In EEC Voting Dates to 1700s

LONDON, Oct. 27 (Reuters)—Britain's vote tomorrow on entering the Common Market involves the tradition of the three-line whip—a parliamentary device handed down from England's fox-hunting aristocracy in the 17th century.

It consists of a routine notice to party members reminding them that a vote or meeting is being held. It may be as simple as: "Your attendance is requested." If the words are underlined once, it means a member "ought to" attend; twice, that he "should" attend; three times, that he "must" attend and follow party policy.

The word "whip" comes from "whipper-in," the term applied to the functionary who kept the hounds from straying when riders came out to hunt the fox.

In tomorrow's vote, the Labor party is issuing a three-line whip to its followers to oppose British entry. But in this age of permissiveness, many members have indicated that they will vote against Labor policy.

N.Y. Grocer Shoots, Kills Robber, Third He Has Slain in 7 Holdups

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (NYT).—The owner of a small grocery, who has shot and killed two robbers and wounded four others in the course of seven holdups since opening his business a year ago, shot and killed another bandit Monday.

Known to the police as "the shooter" for his readiness to fight gunmen with gunfire, Felix B. Toro, the 35-year-old owner of the Quasar Delicatessen in Queens, has now faced 15 bandits in eight holdups since last Thanksgiving and, as he put it yesterday, "never lost a cent."

The robbers, he explained, had either been killed, wounded, frightened away or bluffed into leaving empty-handed by his ultimatum that they would have to "kill me to get the money."

Mr. Toro has a license for his .38-cal. revolver because he is also a part-time private investigator. The man slain by Mr. Toro Monday was identified by the police as David Johnson, a 23-year-old heroin addict and welfare recipient who lived in Queens with his wife, Doris, and three children.

Air Cargo Thefts at Kennedy Decline as Security Tightens

By James M. Markham

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (NYT).—Airlines at John F. Kennedy International Airport, plagued by incessant cargo thievery and attendant bad publicity, have begun tightening their security efforts.

Measures taken include provision of photographic identification badges for cargo handlers, television surveillance of far-flung and easily plundered storage areas, extra lighting, high fences, special vaults for high-value shipments, paid informers and even phony "valuable" cargoes to lure would-be thieves into the open.

And, for the last two years, the airlines have claimed impressive gains in a fight against the mobsters and small-time pilferers who have given the Kennedy Airport a reputation as being the most crime-infested airport in the world.

Lesses Cut

But critics of the industry maintain that it has belatedly become security-conscious only because of proposals to install an anti-crime watchdog agency over New York airports—and that statistics showing a drop in thefts are a cosmetic effort to cover a continuing commercial hemorrhage.

The Port of New York Authority police, on the basis of statistics supplied by the airlines, reported that in 1970 cargo thefts at Kennedy totaled $1,445,386, but that in the first nine months of this year were cut dramatically to $385,938. Between 1966 and the beginning of 1970, while the volume of air freight at Kennedy doubled to nearly $10 billion, reported thefts quadrupled, from $877,350 to $3.3 million.

The airlines attribute the reported drop in thefts to the Air Security Council, which they created in 1968 to coordinate a tightening of security at Kennedy, LaGuardia and Newark Airports.

A year earlier, following revelations by the New York State Commission of Investigation of organized crime's penetration of the air freight trucking and handling industry, members of the state legislature began pushing a proposal to extend the authority of the Waterfront Commission of New York Harbor to New York airports.

In recent testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Commissioner Richard J. Vander Plaats of the waterfront commission charged that the airlines' "loss figures are merely the visible tip of the iceberg and do not even begin to tell the whole story of cargo thefts at the airports."

The Senate committee is considering the proposed legislation to extend the commission's authority to the airports.

'Morning-After' Pill Averts Pregnancy, Study Indicates

By Jane E. Brody

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (NYT).—A study of 1,000 women at the University of Michigan, most of them coeds, has demonstrated that the "morning-after" pill is a safe and effective "emergency" method of preventing pregnancy.

The pill used in this study was a synthetic estrogen called diethylstilbestrol, a drug which has been used extensively for the treatment of endometriosis, an abnormal growth of uterine tissue.

No pregnancies occurred among the women in the study, although most had had sexual intercourse without using contraception at a time in their cycle when they would be likely to be fertile. Calculations based on the risk of pregnancy following a single unprotected act of intercourse anytime during the menstrual cycle indicate that without the drug at least 28 to 40 pregnancies would have occurred among the women.

Results of the study are described by Dr. Lucile Kirtland Kuchera in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. She said that she published her results—which she said were comparable to those obtained by other physicians—to acquaint the general practitioner, who sees many of the women who might benefit from the drug, with the treatment schedule.

In a telephone interview, Dr. Kuchera said that, to her knowledge, "Too much drug is involved to use this as a regular, monthly method of contraception."

Dr. Kuchera remarked, "Why should we have to use a 25-milligram pill when the regular birth-control pills have so much less estrogen?" Some of the oral contraceptives contain as little as one-tenth of a milligram of estrogen.

In her article, Dr. Kuchera remarked that before the "morning-after" pill, "in this clinic we had only told the patient to wait for her next menses—do not very counseling advice to a woman who does not want to be pregnant."

She gave credit to Dr. John McLean Morris and his colleagues at Yale University School of Medicine, who did the pioneering work in developing contraceptive agents that could be used after-the-fact. Dr. Morris has found that a variety of estrogen and estrogen-like compounds can do the job and he is trying to develop one that could be used as a regular contraceptive.

Diethylstilbestrol is believed to work as an anti-fertility agent by preventing the implantation of a fertilized egg in the uterine wall.

edge, the "morning-after" pill was used widely in "big city hospitals for rape victims" and in the college health services of many of the Big Ten schools.

In the Michigan study, the women were given 25 milligrams (a milligram is 0.000001 of an ounce) of diethylstilbestrol twice a day for five days, starting within 72 hours of sexual intercourse. More than 70 percent of the women had had sexual intercourse within three days of their expected time of ovulation. Eighty-nine percent of the women had used no form of contraception or the condoms their partners used had broken during the act. Most of the remaining 11 percent had used a partially effective or totally ineffective contraceptive method.

Nearly half the women had "virtually no side reactions," Dr. Kuchera reported. The rest reported relatively minor side effects, most commonly nausea or vomiting.

The doctor, who is a senior physician at the University of Michigan Health Service, emphasized that the drug should be considered "an emergency type of treatment only" for women who were unexpectedly exposed to pregnancy. These might include rape victims, women who acted on impulse and women who used their contraceptives improperly.

Cars Burned In Protests Against Thieu

SAIGON, Oct. 27 (UPI).—Government opponents today fire-bombed an automobile and an American jeep in a new outbreak of protests against the inauguration of President Nguyen Van Thieu Sunday.

The jeep, belonging to the U.S. Navy, was burned near Tan Son Nhut airport. Later, a Molotov cocktail destroyed a Japanese-made car near U.S. Ambassador Elsworth C. Bunker's residence. No arrests were reported.

SAIGON police announced they would pay a $150 reward for information leading to arrests in the campaign of violence against Mr. Thieu's inauguration for another four-year term.

Buildings Are Searched

In another relentless predawn security check, police knocked on doors of hundreds of apartments today to awaken residents adjacent to the site of the inaugural ceremony.

It was the second day of searches of tall buildings overlooking the inaugural site. Police threatened to search on sight anyone who failed to follow instructions or who appeared in windows or on roofs during the ceremony.

On the battlefronts, the South Vietnamese Command reported that Communist troops renewed attacks against the Cambodian rubber plantation town of Kret and assaulted a village in Tay Ninh Province, northwest of Saigon.

Troop Column Attacked

In Cambodia, the High Command there said the Communists had launched a series of coordinated attacks on a 20,000-man Cambodian troop column on Highway 6, leading north from Phnom Penh, and said it looked like the start of a Communist dry season offensive.

In South Vietnam's Central Highlands province of Kontum, American B-52 bombers carried out raids on Communist storage areas and a U.S. observation plane was shot down. The two crew members were wounded.

U.S. military sources said that the American Command passed two milestones in the war today—aircraft losses passed 8,000, due to the destruction from Typhoon Hester, and the number of U.S. troops in Vietnam fell below 200,000 for the first time since early 1966.

Argentina Sentences 3 in Kidnap Attempt

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 27 (AP).—A former police officer and two students were sentenced to prison yesterday for the attempted kidnapping last year of a Soviet diplomat.

Carlos Benigno Balbuena, 25, the former federal policeman named as the leader of the plot, was sentenced to seven years and the two 25-year-old students, Guillermo Johnson and Alberto Germinal Borrel, to six years each.

The target of the kidnap attempt was Yuri Pivovarov, a member of the Soviet commercial mission. Police guards at the embassy thwarted the attempt.

Pope, Patriarch Join In Plea on Mideast

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 27 (Reuters).—Pope Paul VI and the leader of the Syrian Orthodox Church today appealed for peace in the Middle East.

The appeal came in a joint statement by the Pope and Patriarch Ignatius Jacoby III of Antioch, who left today after his visit to the Vatican.

"As Christian pastors, the Pope and Patriarch raise their common appeal to the leaders of the peoples to increase the effort toward achieving lasting peace among nations and toward removing the obstacles that prevent so many men from enjoying the fruits of justice and religious freedom," the statement said.

"Their appeal is directed to all areas of the world and in particular to that land hallowed by the preaching, the death and the resurrection of Our Lord Jesus Christ."

Handbills Back Auto Workers At Spanish Plant

BARCELONA, Oct. 27 (AP).—Handbills calling for demonstrations and strikes in support of auto workers looked out of the Seat plant were distributed here today.

The handbills were said to be the work of outlawed workers' committees and underground student associations.

Trouble at the Seat (Sociedad Espanola de Automobiles de Turismo) plant began 10 days ago when police fired on several hundred workers staging a sit-in at the plant. They were seeking reinstatement of men discharged during a strike last summer. Strikes are illegal in Spain.

Several persons were injured in clashes with the police and about 50 men were detained.

About 12,000 of the 20,000 employees were locked out without pay until last Monday, when work resumed. But a go-slow by the workers led the management to lock out between 8,000 and 11,000 of them again yesterday. Those locked out include most of the skilled men, so production is virtually at a standstill.

Heroin Detector Takes 30 Seconds To Screen GIs Leaving Vietnam

PALO ALTO, Calif., Oct. 27 (WP).—A device developed by a U.S. company can detect in 30 seconds whether a person has been using heroin.

The device, called the Prat, has been used since June to screen all U.S. military personnel leaving South Vietnam. Among the 100,000 GIs who have been screened since June, 3.7 percent showed indications that they had recently taken heroin.

Prat detects its little as one billionth of a gram of hard drugs in the human body within seconds through analysis of urine. The device is being used to detect "morphine-like" structures in the urine, such as heroin, but its manufacturer, the Syva Co., is attempting to adapt it to detect amphetamines, barbiturates and cocaine.

The Defense Department has installed eight of the consoles, each costing $25,000, in South Vietnam.

East Germans Free Nurse, Her Fiancé in U.S. Is Informed

By Claudia Levy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (WP).—Elizabeth Neumann, 34, an East Berlin nurse imprisoned in East Germany two years ago with her American fiancé for allegedly plotting to flee the country, was released yesterday and allowed to enter West Berlin, Washington attorney Riecy New said.

Mr. New, who helped negotiate the release last July of her fiancé, Lyle Jenkins, 31, of Cambridge, Mass., said Miss Neumann had been freed through the efforts of West German lawyer Jürgen Strange and his East German partner, Wolfgang Vogel, arranger of the 1962 trade of Rudolf Abel and U-2 pilot Gary Power. No details of yesterday's release were announced.

Mr. Jenkins, a linguistics student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said the U.S. government has given her permission to come to this country so they may be married. His lawyers said he planned to fly to West Berlin.

Head Nurse at Hospital

Mr. Jenkins met Miss Neumann when he was a medical student at the Charité Hospital in East Berlin. In 1957 while he was working on his linguistics dissertation at the East Berlin Academy of Sciences, he said that before their arrest in September, 1966, they had tried repeatedly to be married through legal channels but were turned down.

Their arrests were caused by the escape to West Berlin of Miss Neumann's best friend, the daughter of an East German secret police official, Mr. Jenkins said, adding that he had tried out courtship for Miss Neumann as being too dangerous.

But East German police arrested Mr. Jenkins and an American friend as they drove to West Berlin and arrested Miss Neumann in East Berlin on the same day, charging the man with helping East Germans to leave the country and Miss Neumann with "deserting the republic," he continued.

Mr. Jenkins and Miss Neumann have not seen each other since that "morning." Her mother, a railroad employee, wrote Mr. Jenkins recently that Miss Neumann was still in prison, the first word he had had of her in nearly two years.

You think I'm just another pretty face? I'm not.

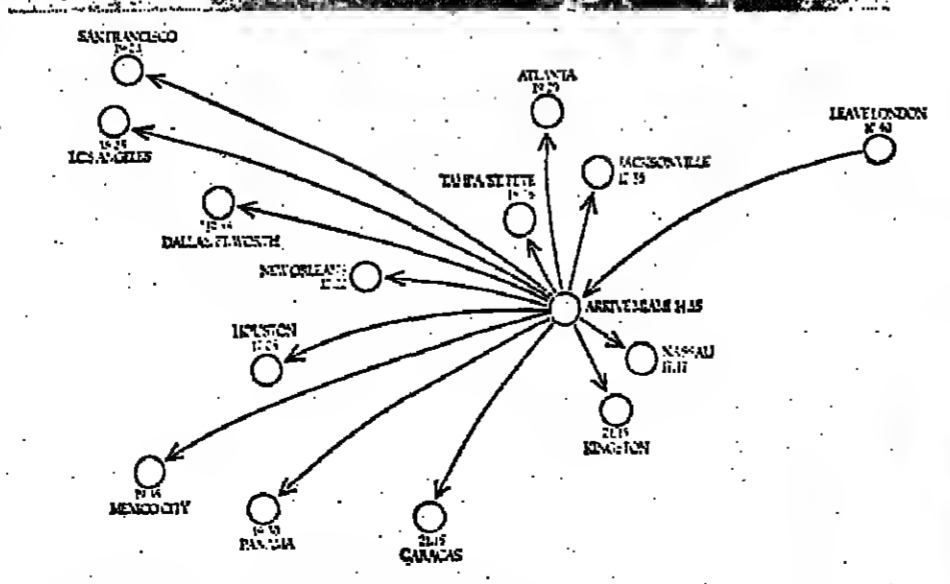

I'm a fresh attitude towards air travel to the States. A refreshingly honest definition of who we are, why we're special, and what we're doing to be even better.

Here's who we are: We're Cheryl (me), and Margie and Linda and Laura and Jo. And a lot of people behind the scenes, like Bob and Tom and Ron and Bud. (They're not just pretty faces either.)

And here's what we're doing (and why we're special): We're helping nice people (hopefully you) go to nice places in the Sunshine States of America, like Miami and other warm places in Florida and the Caribbean and Latin America, plus New Orleans and Houston and Los Angeles and San Francisco. We're helping nice people have fun en route, too: with movies* and stereo* and delicious meals, and just being left alone, if that's what you want.

The way we figure it: the more we like you, the more you'll like us. It's that simple.

So we're not just a bunch of people. We're an airline. And you can call us by our first name: National.

Juliana Visits Birthplace of William of Orange

DILLENBURG, West Germany, Oct. 27 (Reuters)—Queen Juliana of the Netherlands today made a pilgrimage to this small but historic town near Bonn where William of Orange, founder of the Dutch nation, was born in 1533.

The queen and Prince Bernhard, accompanied by West German President Gustav Heinemann and his wife, visited the carefully tended remains of the famous linden tree under which William signed in 1569 to help the European Low Countries in their independence struggle against Spain.

They also toured Dillenburg Castle, destroyed by fire in 1760, where William was born. All that remains of the castle today are some underground chambers, though a 19th-century tower which houses a museum stands on the site.

Today was the second day of a four-day state visit to West Germany—the first ever by members of the Dutch royal family.

'Vasectomy Fairs' May Help India to Reduce Birth Rate

NEW DELHI, Oct. 27 (NYT)—Officials seeking an answer to India's population problem are organizing "vasectomy fairs" in the countryside.

Hardened by the success of two fairs, for the voluntary sterilization of males, in southern Kerala state, the government is planning what it describes as "mass vasectomy camps" in each of India's 220 districts.

In Kerala, at a vasectomy fair held at Ernakulam in July, 63,000 men were sterilized. In the same town last December, 15,000 men underwent the 10-minute operation.

The fair, held in colorful carnival style, turned out to be a major attraction for villagers. They came on foot and in bullock carts with their wives and children. They were served meals and given 100 rupees ($13) each and saris for their wives.

Half of the funds to pay the cash rewards was donated by CARE. The cash reward proved to be a major attraction for the poor of Kerala, whose monthly earning is less than a third of the reward.

Kerala officials had expected only a trickle of volunteers but the turnout was so heavy that the operations had to be continued almost around the clock.

Turkish Government Yields To Military, Stays in Office

ANKARA, Oct. 27 (UPI)—President Cevdet Sunay of Turkey refused to accept the resignation today of Premier Nihat Erim and told him to continue his military-backed government.

The military leaders who brought Mr. Erim to power seven months ago said they would take over the country if parliament did not keep him in office, political sources said.

Mr. Erim accepted the charge and resumed his duties only 12 hours after he tendered his resignation, saying that he did not have the support of the major political parties and could not continue.

Political sources said the army leaders, during a five-hour meeting of the national security council, told Mr. Erim to withdraw his resignation.

Compelled to Stay "The necessities compelling me to stay in office were made clear to me during the meeting," he told newsmen after the meeting. He would not comment further.

The political crisis arose when Mr. Erim said he had lost the support of the major political parties, particularly the majority Justice party of former Premier Suleyman Demirel, who was forced to resign by the army last March.

The army demanded "a stronger, reliable and stable government" or it would take over. A political source said today that at the meeting the army told Mr. Sunay and Mr. Erim that "they would not be able to prevent the full application of Czech Diplomat Excluded by U.S.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (UPI)—The State Department said today that the United States has declared the senior political officer of the Czechoslovak Embassy here, Karel Simunek, "no longer desirable" and barred his return to this country.

The move apparently was in retaliation for the Czech order of Oct. 19 expelling Samuel G. Wise Jr., political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Prague, on the ground of espionage.

State Department spokesman Charles W. Bray declined to say on what grounds Mr. Simunek had been found "no longer desirable" or whether any charges had been made against him. At present he is in Czechoslovakia on leave.

The statement climaxed a Czechoslovak campaign against "utter and unfounded fabrications" in which Prague has accused Britain of stirring up the arms affair.

Dutch police in Amsterdam had seized a plane-load of Czechoslovak-made arms flown in from Prague last week. The arms allegedly were meant for the outlawed Irish Republican Army. They also arrested the pilot of the charter aircraft and an American, who was charged with importing arms without a license.

Diplomatic sources said the recent expulsion of 105 Soviet diplomats from Britain for espionage may also have induced the Czechoslovak government to call off the visit.

Prague Aide Delays Visit To Britain

Czechoslovaks Cite IRA Arms Charges

VIENNA, Oct. 27 (UPI)—Czechoslovak Foreign Minister Jan Marko today postponed a two-day visit to Britain because of an "unfounded anti-Czechoslovak campaign" over the smuggling of arms to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Marko was to make an official visit on Nov. 15 and 16 at the invitation of Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home. But Coteka, the official Czechoslovak news agency, said that the government had told Britain the visit was postponed indefinitely after "certain British circles and mass media unleashed an unfounded anti-Czechoslovak campaign, accusing Czechoslovakia of delivering weapons to Ireland."

"The British side was informed that under these circumstances, it would be impossible for such a visit to bring the expected results," the statement said.

The UN Vote on China

The United States argued that Taiwan was a "member" of the United Nations representing and controlling 14 million people, and that it should not be expelled. Albania countered that the issue was not who should be a member but which of two claimants to the single China seat should occupy it, and that the occupant should be Peking. The General Assembly accepted Albania's framing of the issue and Albania's recommendation on the issue too. Thus was the People's Republic invited to take "China's" place in the Assembly, Security Council and specialized agencies. Taiwan, which had held that place more than a quarter-century, walked out minutes before its formal expulsion was voted.

No country, of course, voted primarily on the basis of these juridical considerations. The argumentation concealed, but barely, a political exercise whose thrust was to rearrange a conspicuous corner of world politics in keeping with changing realities of world power. Plainly, most delegations felt that Peking's size and nuclear status, its passage through the Cultural Revolution and its fast-extending outward reach, entitled it to a place in the UN, and better, on its own terms—even if that meant excluding Taiwan—than not at all. Some countries were eager, for reasons of pride or domestic politics, to pull a feather from the American eagle's tail. Others simply ignored the fact that the United States has a special relationship with Taiwan. The consensus, we surmise, was that it was past time to begin pursuing a policy of realistic accommodation toward Peking—a policy whose most intense advocate these days is the United States.

That Washington suffered an important defeat is unquestionable. To pull out so many stops and to lose is not only a disappointment—the more so that some Americans apparently expected victory—but a demonstration of the decline of American influence. On the key vote, all NATO members except Greece and Portugal defected; so did six Latin countries (including Cuba); so did Pakistan. One does not have to accept Ambassador Bush's overwrought judgment that the vote marked a "moment of infamy" to understand the administration's dismay. Peking is certain to try to squeeze propaganda and political advantage from it.

Secretary Rogers's pronouncement, however, is another matter. He had said on Aug. 2: "The outcome, of course, will be decided by 127 members of the UN." But on Tuesday he seemed to jettison some of the good diplomacy and good sportsmanship embodied in that stance. While his opening statement was ambiguous, and in subsequent response to questions he specifically ruled out a reduction in U.S. support for the UN "in retaliation for this vote," he went on in the same breath to argue that this country has "probably contributed more than our share." This line is hardly calculated to discourage those in Congress who are plainly bent on reducing our contribution as "retaliation for this vote."

We can imagine no surer way to convert a manageable defeat on one issue into a major disaster for the whole American international position than by pursuing a petty and vindictive course in respect to the financing of the UN. That other nations would criticize us for such a course is neither here nor there. The real point is that the United Nations is a leading arena and instrument for the furtherance of American national interests—interests in peace-keeping, negotiation, stability, development and humanitarian relief. It is not just that a crybaby's role ill befits a greater power; still less does it baffle a great power to violate its treaty obligations, which is precisely what we would be doing by cutting back our financial contributions to the UN. It is more than a little odd that some of the very same people who make the most of the need to "honor our commitments," in their justification of our dragged-out Vietnam war effort, would be the first to dishonor them, on a genuinely global scale, by way of reprisal against a majority vote in the General Assembly of the UN.

Moreover, it is far from clear that the American defeat is "a mistake of major proportions." The example of American loyalty to Taiwan surely is a matter of pride to many Americans and a matter of value to foreign states which count on American commitments—including many states which voted against Washington. Chiang Kai-shek's departure from the UN is lamentable, the precedent of expulsion troubling. But Chiang's rule over the territory he controls has not been shaken and he retains his American alliance guarantee. Peking would be the first to concede that UN membership represents more the symbol than the substance of real power. Its insistence on entering the world body on its own terms, or not at all, best reveals its own view.

Finally, the uproar over Taiwan's expulsion should not obscure the fact that, as the United States had urged, Peking has been taken into the principal organization devoted to securing world peace. We have never thought that a mere acceptance into world councils would exert a magic balm on Chinese policy. But if Peking's entry will not make it easier to resolve or ease the world's tensions, surely an effective approach to them cannot be made without the participation of the People's Republic. To help bring China into the UN in order to advance peace, and then to diminish our support of the UN, makes no sense at all.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

International Opinion

Peking's UN Entry

The United Nations, in seating mainland China in place of the Nationalist regime, has properly if belatedly recognized an inescapable fact of international life. The Communist government in Peking has effectively ruled 750 million Chinese for more than two decades. It will continue to rule them in the foreseeable future and must be represented in the United Nations if the principle of universality of membership is to have any real meaning. That the majority chose also to expel completely the Nationalist government, is, we think, regrettable.

—From the Evening Sun (Baltimore).

The shocking decision to expel Nationalist China while seating the Communist Peking regime was indeed a "moment of infamy." The United States officially has recognized a sense of realistic attitude toward Red China, ordaining perhaps a reasoned acceptance of the fact that she exists, but there is not room in that liberalizing policy for murderous designs with an enemy's knife in the back of a friend. The United States must not—and in conscience cannot—continue to be the principal support of this Tower of Babel, which clearly has become the forum of our enemies.

—From the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner.

Taken all in all, it is a crisis of confidence in American policies which has manifested itself in the result of the UN China debate. In recent times Washington's foreign policy has created many doubts about the extent to which any single country can count on U.S. support and cover in decisive questions. This increased uncertainty has now found an escape-valve via a demonstration of discontent on the stage of the United Nations. It remains to be seen whether the meaning of this signal will be understood and what consequences will be drawn from it. This applies to the U.S.A." which will have to come to terms with the defeat it has suffered—the most serious defeat its diplomacy has ever suffered in the UN—and it applies also to America's European partners, who have made only a beginning in their efforts to constitute themselves a viable unit of international politics.

—From the Neue Zürcher Zeitung (Zurich).

There can be no doubt that if the Nixon administration had truly wanted to retain Nationalist China's UN seat, we could have prevailed. The U.S. provides 39 percent of the UN's revenues. Now our former good friends have departed, understanding, if we do not, that their expulsion marks the completion of the conversion of the United Nations into an American-financed propaganda arm of the Communists. If the United Nations ever had any value for the free world, it has none now. It is a day to despair for liberty.

—From the Richmond (Va.) News Leader.

The vote means a loss of face for the United States but not much else. The idea of two Chinas was ours and was to help the morale of the Nationalist government after the shock of President Nixon's announcement that he was going to pay an official visit to Peking. The vote means nobody much believes in Chiang Kai-shek anymore and that the world has written off his claims and pretensions. As a matter of noblesse oblige, the United States will have to keep pretending, but for how long?

—From the Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.

That historic step may be the most important thing the UN has done in two decades or more. It will not in itself solve the world's problems but it raises the possibility of more resolution through the UN.

—From the Honolulu Advertiser.

NEW YORK—According to Mr. John Barth, the American insurance actuary and an admitted expert in interpreting mortality tables, the average length of life for the last 50 years has increased by 10 and there is every indication that an equal amount will be added in the next 50 years. He said that the average life span is now 75 instead of 65 and that someday it might very well reach 250 to 300 years.

"Good Grief, Your Excellency! The Schedule Says We're Supposed To Be Visiting Them Today."

UN: Where Do We Go From Here?

By James Reston

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—The vote to bring Peking into the United Nations and expel Taiwan changes the procedures but not the realities of world politics.

The realities remain the same. China's power rests on its vast population and territory, and not on any seat in the UN. The vote does not diminish the power of the United States, the Soviet Union or the other major powers, but it does give Peking a new platform, new influence, and new procedures for engaging in the work of the world.

Accordingly, much will depend now on how Chou En-lai and his associates in Peking react to China's new responsibilities as one of the five permanent members of the UN Security Council—whether they accept the vote as an invitation to help in the peaceful settlement of world disputes—the main purpose of the UN—or whether they attempt to use the UN as an instrument of their own national ambitions and of world revolution.

It will take time to get an answer to this question, but meanwhile the vote is obviously only the first of a number of obvious changes. There will be a faster movement now among the nations to establish diplomatic relations with Peking. Belgium did so a few hours after the vote—though this was obviously in train before—and the leaders of many of the major nations, observing President Nixon's coming visit to Peking, will be lining up to follow him.

Effect in Japan

The effect of the vote will be more important and immediate in Japan, now coming to the end of the Sato regime, and already in the middle of what promises to be a critical election. Tokyo is not likely to move too fast until the U.S. Senate has approved the "reversion" treaty which hands back Okinawa to Japanese control, but thereafter, there will undoubtedly be considerable pressure on Premier Sato or his successor to establish diplomatic relations with Peking, even if this means weakening Tokyo's ties with Chiang Kai-shek.

The U.S. has an immediate problem, too, with Generalissimo Chiang. Despite all the efforts of the Nixon administration to keep the UN from voting to expel Taiwan, Chiang Kai-shek is known to feel that President Nixon's decision to visit Peking was the critical decision in this whole question of who should represent China. It is understood that he discussed this in the bitterest anti-Nixon terms with former Premier Kishi of Japan before the vote. So the Nixon administration has a problem of how to reconcile its relations with Taiwan and its forthcoming negotiations with Peking.

Other nations have similar problems as a result of the vote. Not only Japan but also the Philippines, Australia, and New Zealand, which went along with the strategy of keeping Taiwan in the UN, are now in the embarrassing position of working out new relationships with an increasingly influential Chinese Communist regime.

Other Problems Eased

The Sato government in Tokyo, keeping in mind the importance of getting the Okinawa reversion treaty through the U.S. Senate, agreed to co-sponsor the Washington resolution in favor of Taiwan, despite savage political opposition at home, but other governments now have similar problems of coming to terms with Peking.

On the other hand, the vote eases problems for Washington more than it does for Tokyo and other capitals. Henry Kissinger has just come back to Washington from Peking, presumably with an agenda for the forthcoming talks between President Nixon and Chou En-lai. The chances are that it will now be easier for the Chinese Communists to talk about the future of Asia with Nixon after their victory than it would have been if the President's policy and tactics had prevailed in the debate and Taiwan had been kept here as a potential government of China. Also, the Nixon-Chou En-lai visit is now likely to take place sooner, probably this year.

Ironically, Nixon, because of his UN defeat, now finds himself in a better position to go to both Peking and to Moscow and talk objectively about the basic problems of security, arms reduction, poverty, Vietnam, Korea, and all the other hangers on from past wars.

Alone among the leaders of the Big Three, he is able to talk openly to the other two. Moscow is not in a position to talk to Peking on similar terms, or vice versa, but Nixon can now negotiate, not because he planned it that way, but precisely because he lost.

No doubt he agrees, at least in public, with Secretary of State Rogers that the vote in the UN is "regrettable"—for he does not like to lose spectacular battles in the UN, the Supreme Court or anywhere else—but as a result of losing at the UN he now has more flexibility on the world scene than he had before.

He has been talking a great deal about arranging a "generation of peace" and meanwhile getting out of Vietnam, and it is hard to see how he can do either unless he can come to some kind of accommodation with the Communists in Peking.

This was always the argument, in terms of power policy, at least, for his initiative in bringing Peking into the UN. He went about it in ways that were mostly defensible and even admirable, but also in ways that were unacceptable to Chou En-lai. What the UN has done, by rejecting his advice, is to give him, and the UN, a chance for a new beginning.

A Legal Mind at Work

By Tom Wicker

disrepute—where once it was so nearly undisputed.

For another thing, if Powell proceeds to easy confirmation as expected, where will that leave Nixon's impassioned declaration of 16 months ago that the Senate would not confirm anyone who "had the misfortune of being born in the South," and that the defeat of G. Harrold Carswell had been "regional discrimination"?

It will leave the earlier statement looking more like political demagoguery than it did at the time, which is not easy to do. It also muddies the administration's past contention that Carswell was the best Southern nominee that could be found; where was Powell? He is older now than he was in 1970, and anyway, Nixon himself told reporters that "10 of him is worth 30 years of most."

Product of Growth?

Moreover, in that angry statement accusing the Senate of discriminating against the South by rejecting Carswell, Nixon contended that the Supreme Court is best constituted when "each section of the country and every major segment of our people can look to the court and see there its legal philosophy articulately represented." The other night, the same President said that "with only nine seats to fill, obviously every group in the country cannot be represented on the court," and therefore his criteria were legal excellence and judicial philosophy.

But let this change be ascribed to growth in office, a process in which inconsistency can be a jewel. A final irony remains in the President's insistence that he had hunted for and found the kind of nominee who would "interpret the Constitution, and not... place himself above the Constitution or outside the Constitution.... He should not twist or bend the Constitution... to perpetuate his personal, political and social views."

Raises Question

That's fine, and every one should hope so. But if so, on what grounds did Nixon pass over these outstanding men in the first place, and send to the ABA the names of two persons that body's reviewing group then labeled "not qualified"? That question is worth asking because it is precisely this kind of gap between presidential rhetoric and presidential action that has brought presidential integrity into such

Midwest Isolationism

Fortress America

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

COLUMBUS, Ind.—Here in the heartland of pre-Pearl Harbor isolationism, a new isolationist specter is rapidly taking on a shape that could drastically limit the ability of President Nixon or any other President to commit U.S. power to the assistance of an ally threatened by military aggression.

By substantial majorities, voters in 61 local households in Indianapolis flatly ruled out "full" or even "partial" military aid to U.S. allies that might be threatened with aggression in four separate areas of the world: Western Europe, Israel, Southeast Asia and Latin America.

To obtain a rough yardstick of the new isolationism, we used pollster Oliver Quayle's index, which measures a voter's reaction to American military involvement abroad in this descending scale: "full" military assistance (including U.S. troops), "partial" military assistance, "minimal" assistance and "none" at all.

For Southeast Asia, locale of the 10-year war in Vietnam, the results are unsurprising: 61 percent of our respondents "regretted" U.S. aid in the event that Israel or such staunch NATO allies as France or West Germany came under the threat of enemy aggression.

Latin American Results

Most surprising of all was Latin America. Our sample showed that, by 83 percent to 37 percent, the low-to-middle-income voters we interviewed were against "partial" or "full" U.S. military assistance. Hence, as regards Latin America, we found an isolationist index of 83 percent.

Those findings in the old Midwest isolationist heartland differed only in degree from recent samples of a thousand voters taken by Mr. Quayle in other areas of the United States. In one Western state, never as isolationist as Indiana, nearly 500 voters opposed "full" military aid to any in Southeast Asia at the same ratio as of Indiana—67 percent. For Israel, Western Europe and Latin America, the isolationist sentiment was less pronounced.

In a Southern state by Mr. Quayle, his sentiment was less hawkish; only the 51 percent of voters who favored it full aid for Western Europe. For Israel, 50-50, and for Asia, 54 percent to "isolationist."

In Indiana, moreover, pie revealed surprises for Sen. George J. South Dakota, an presidential candidate, than any other Democratic hopeful, spouse of the new is

Shannon on Sartre

William V. Shannon's article (HEAT, Oct. 22) on Sartre's lack of political sense is obviously the product of someone not only over 30, but totally unaware of the world as seen through the eyes and mind of a young person today. Sartre sees clearly the limits of intellectuality, and the problems facing the young intellectual. He knows as well that the only possible answer, if one is to be true to himself, is to "put his body as well as his mind on the line." But the ability to be true to oneself is a sense that is lost to Mr. Shannon and, at this point, to the majority of Americans, to whom each moment agony of compass reassurances that turn out all right, light—or worse, if he "handle it." Mr. Shannon's politics is only a play between parties and parties. He is not a young person. He is not a young intellectual. He is not a young person. He is not a young intellectual. He is not a young person. He is not a young intellectual.

Theater in Moscow One-Night Stand for Yiddish Show

By Theodore Shabad MOSCOW, Oct. 27 (NYT)—Anna Guzik, once the queen of the Yiddish variety stage in the Soviet Union, reappeared recently for a one-night stand...

Her show of song, dance and skits was announced in rather neutral fashion in Moscow newspapers as consisting of "scenes from plays, monologues, folk songs and songs of Soviet composers..."

With the assistance of an accompanist, two other Yiddish music hall actors and just a few props and changes of costume on the bare stage, Miss Guzik quickly established rapport with her audience, which joined in rhythmic clapping whenever song or dance provided an excuse...

During intermission, members of the audience talked happily about the evening in Russian and Yiddish as they stood in line for refreshments or strolled through the corridors...

Music in London: Judy Collins And the Urban Folk Mystique

LONDON, Oct. 27 (NYT)—Reviewing a recital by Joni Mitchell two years ago, I confessed to getting away before the last encore, "aware as I have never been before that my age gap was showing..."

This morning's rave notices encouraged my suspicion that there may be an even more decisive experience gap. "She silently suggests," said the Financial Times, "that if she were not standing there improving us (sic), the classical Symphonies would be exploiting her considerable talents in the palm courts and opera houses of Europe..."

The sneer of professionalism, of any evidence of acquired accomplishment, is part of the urban folk mystique, a reflection, one assumes, of the egalitarian sentiments of the youthful millions who constitute the urban folk public...

Judy Collins inspires such observations because she is, as a performer, clearly the most talented of the lot, and the most accomplished, too. She sings other people's songs more eloquently than she composes do...

But she probably knows that she might lose her public if she did. And that is what is so disquieting.

A declarer who can afford to draw trumps and has no urgent need to do anything else should normally do so as quickly as possible. The diagramed deal shows what can happen to a declarer who decides to wait. When North opened one no-trump South had a suitable hand for Stayman: a five-card suit with borderline prospects of game. His hold of two hearts was encouraging but not forcing. North raised to three hearts and South carried on to game. The spade five was led and ducked to East's king. East returned the jack, and South should have won with the ace in dummy and taken a trump finesse. In that way, this optimistic contract would have succeeded.

Instead, South won the second trick with the spade queen and took a club finesse, losing to the king. From this point the contract was doomed, although it is not easy to see from the diagram. When East won with the club king he returned a third spade to dummy's ace, and South belatedly finessed in trumps, running the jack around to West's ace.

The position was now this:

♠ 109
♥ AK107
♦ A7

EAST
♠ Q8
♥ K754
♣ J95

WEST
♥ A2
♦ Q854
♣ 1082

SOUTH
♠ Q109
♥ K7543
♦ QJ95

The defense had three tricks, and West correctly diagnosed that the defenders had no prospects for a fourth one outside the trump suit. He made the fine play of returning the thirteenth spade, promoting a trick for his partner.

If the declarer ruffed in dummy East would discard, leaving the queen-eight as a guaranteed trick. With any other play East would ruff with the eight to produce the setting trick.

This promotion possibility would not have developed if South had drawn trumps at once.

Neither side was vulnerable. The bidding: South 1NT, West 2♥, South 2♠, West 2♥, South 3♥, West 3♥, South 4♥.

THE DIARY OF ANAIS NIN, VOLUME FOUR

Harcourt, Brace and Jonavovich, $9

Reviewed by Gore Vidal

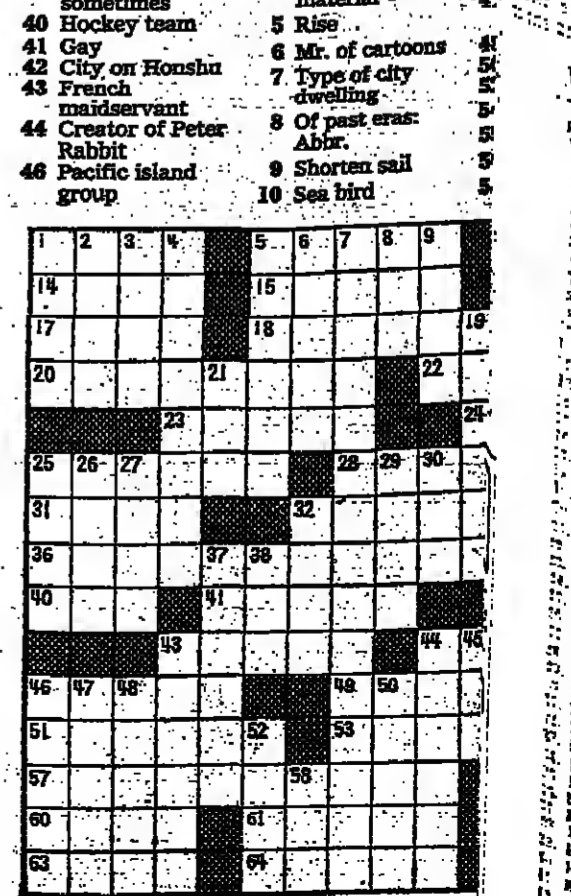

LAST year, Anais Nin cabled me in Rome: Volume Four of her Diaries (1944-47) was to be published. She needed my permission to print what she had written about me. Into the time machine, I thought, as I entered the bar of the Font Royal in Paris to find Anais, at 67, as beautiful as ever. "I've been on television all day," West German television with Jeanne Moraux. In the park. She gave me a hard look. It had been told that she thought the character of Marietta Donagel in my book "Two Sisters" was based on her. "I've marked the pages where you appear. It's very systematic. Edmund Wilson was wonderful about his portrait. Now, anything you want out, I'll take out. But if there is too much to cut, then the whole thing comes out."

"Dutifully, I read what she showed me (not, incidentally, the entire portrait—several fine warts were withheld for the current showing). I suggested that she cut a line or two involving a third person. She agreed, obviously relieved that I, too, was intent on being wonderful. Who then is Anais Nin? Born in 1903; daughter of a Spanish composer-pianist, brought up in France; the orphanally transplanted to New York as a child where she began to keep a diary in order to win her absent father's love—a tall order and, consequently, a vast diary running now to many millions of words. In the early '30s she returned to France, married a wealthy businessman (not mentioned in the earlier volumes), played at being a poor artist ("never understood until now—1945—why I had to make myself poor enough in Paris to go to the pavement. It was because all my friends went there, and I wanted to reach the same level of poverty and denial"), met and helped to launch Henry Miller. She also began to write poetic monologues like "House of Incest" and "Winter of Artifice."

At the start of the war, she went back to New York, with a second wealthy husband who makes—at his request—no appearance in the diaries. Together they created a romantic Bohemian atmosphere in a five-floor walk-up apartment in Greenwich Village. Again she played at poverty (I was shocked when she told me one day that I should let her husband pay for dinner because he was not a poor artist, as they had pretended, but a banker). Failing to get her books published commercially, she printed them herself—quite beautifully—and became something of an underground legend in New York. At this point the present diary begins. A volume of short stories, "Under a Glass Bell," was taken up by Edmund Wilson in the New Yorker. Wilson fell in love with her but she did not fall in love with him. She was now more interested in a circle of young men—the transparent children—who attended her from the grossness of the harsh, competitive New York world. Incidentally, although she resolute-

Beats Petrosian Fischer Moves Chess Final

From Wire Dispatches

HAIRES, Oct. 27.—Robert J. (Bobby) Fischer told a march that he "would be simple" not to say that the year in the world "is Fischer." He gets his chance at spring when he meets the world champion, Boris Petrosian.

His sixth game of their challenger's round series, the United States defeated Tigran Petrosian of the Soviet Union for the fourth straight time, thus winning the right to play for the title.

In 46 moves—gave Fischer the 6 1/2 points needed to win the remaining games in the scheduled 12-game match. Petrosian, a former world champion, lost to Fischer $7,500. With his victory, the 20-year-old Brooklyn high-school dropout becomes the first American to reach the final step in the elimination series for the world championship.

The procedure for picking the site will probably be the same as that for the Fischer-Petrosian match: The highest bidder among neutral countries will win, with the consent of the United States Chess Federation and the Soviet Chess Federation.

For 10 years, Fischer, a lanky bachelor with wild hair, also than chess, has considered himself the best player in the world. But until recently he had refused to prove it in the long and grinding rounds of elimination tournaments.

During the elimination matches he maintained a winning streak that reached 20 games and included two 6-to-0 victories over grandmasters—a record that had never before been recorded in modern high-level match and tournament play.

The daring and flash of his board game has often attracted a crowd of onlookers, and he has become a hero. He has defeated the 42-year-old Petrosian, who held the world title six years before it was taken away by Spassky, in a tail-end winning streak. He posted the decisive 1 1/2 points by winning the first, losing the second, drawing the third, fourth and fifth, and then winning the last four straight.

Fischer, playing whites, opened the game with pawn-to-king-four. Petrosian responded with a French defense—the same defense he used in the third game, which ended in a draw.

On his fourth move, Petrosian tried a rather unusual variation. He seemed to have equalized but Fischer had a slight edge in development throughout the early play.

Petrosian exchanged queens in an effort to end the pressure and get into an ending. This weakened his pawns, however, and Fischer was quick to take advantage. Three moves later, Fischer forced a pawn exchange which left Petrosian's remaining pawns in even worse shape.

Feeling that normal defense would be useless, Petrosian tried an inroad on the king's side, letting his pawns fall.

By the 32d move, Fischer was three pawns ahead. Petrosian's only hope was a mating attack on Fischer's king.

He developed sufficient threat to force Fischer to give up a knight for two pawns. That gave Fischer a total of five pawns for the piece—more than equivalent.

Petrosian resigned when it was clear that the pawns could not be stopped. Cheers broke out from more than 1,000 spectators in the auditorium of the San Martin Theater. It was followed by more applause from nearly 2,000 fans in the lobby who were unable to obtain seats in the crowded theater.

The crowd in the lobby swelled to more than 5,000, calling for Fischer to appear, but he refused. Petrosian, tired and dejected, only shook his head, stood up and walked dejectedly toward his dressing room. His wife, who had sat in the fourth row throughout the tournament, came on stage, picked up Petrosian's coffee container and followed her husband to the dressing room.

OLYMPIC SIGHT—The construction of Olympic Stadium—now covered with netting and other superstructures—has become one of Munich's leading sightseeing attractions.

For Some, the Games Have Begun at Olympic Site

By Stuart Troup

MUNICH, Oct. 27 (AP)—A full 10 months before the torch is to be officially lit, the site of the 1972 Olympics has become a spectacular attraction, and some unofficial games already have begun.

The opening game, not surprisingly, is to find a parking space. The parking areas are all ready, and already full on weekends. Game two, from a popular standpoint, is lining up for an elevator ride to the top of the 550-foot-tall television tower which stood on the site for some time before ground was broken for the 1972 stadium.

From the foot of the tower, conveniently attached to a Wienerly — Germany's answer to a combination Howard Johnson-Redicks — thousands of the pre-opening spectators can be seen trickling like so many ants, up and over the hillside that border one side of the stadium, which are still in the making.

The games on the hills are many: fly a kite, watch the stadium workmen climb the fishnet-like superstructures, kick a soccer ball, jockey for position to photograph the television tower, open a sandwich on a grassy knoll, watch the workmen install a piece of glass, feed the baby, walk the dog and raised the camera for another angle of the stadium.

Exactly how the stadium will look is still somewhat difficult to imagine, even though they are scheduled for completion within two months. The difficulty lies in the free-form, tent-like coverings of glass and metal, and the great expanses of netting—supported by huge metal poles—from which the workmen precariously are making the finishing touches. It is as if the circus has come to Munich and the acrobats are working the outside of the tents for now.

On the hillside, meanwhile, the strange construction is the subject of much conjecture. "Very bad, terrible. It could collapse," declares a Bavarian. "A masterpiece of fantastic design," says another. "No one will ever forget what they will see next summer in Munich."

Actually, what will be seen of the Olympics at Munich beginning next Aug. 26 will take place about 2 1/2 miles from the center of the city. And the game of visiting the Olympic site during the ensuing two weeks will be a mile more difficult than it is now, especially for out-of-towners. The hotels will be filled only by those out-of-towners who hold tickets to the games.

"No ticket will be sold without proof of lodgings and anyone who wants a bed in Munich during the games must show a ticket for an Olympic event for each day of his stay," according to Herbert Knaus, secretary-general of the organizing committee. The exceptions will be West Germans, as well as Austrians and Swiss, whose homes may be within easy driving distance of Munich.

The stadium in which the games will open will seat 48,000 and have standing room for another 32,000. Each day, however, concurrent events will be held in the other stadium or in the swimming enclosure or at the equestrian site in nearby Riem, and the organizing committee has reserved 120,000 beds a day for each day of the games.

But for tourists and Germans, the games have already begun. From the hillside—which grew from the 350 million cubic feet of rubble from Munich that was dumped there after World War II—they can be seen almost daily. They are not Olympic events but the winners of the find-a-parking-space-in-a-maze game and those who have clocked the best times between getting on line at the television tower and returning to Wienerly deserve some kind of award for endurance.

Workmen scale netting to put finishing touches on stadium roof at Olympic site.

Extra TV Game May Be for College Football Title

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (AP)—If the National Collegiate Athletic Association Council and NCAA member institutions approve, the first major college championship football game will be held Dec. 9, 1972. The game would become part of a new television package of college football to be presented to the three major networks.

The NCAA TV Committee insists it is not proposing a championship game. The committee, headed by the Syracuse athletic director, J. M. Decker, says it simply wants an added game between teams to be selected at the end of the season. The game would be known as the "Football Hall of Fame Game."

Tom Hansen, assistant executive of the NCAA, said: "It will obviously assume championship proportions if the right teams are picked." He said that if the game were to be held this week, Oklahoma and Nebraska would be the likely choices.

Hansen also said television announcers would "probably bill the game as one for the national championship."

The NCAA contract with the American Broadcasting Company expires at the end of this season. The association will offer its new package to ABC, the National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System.

Casper Is Eighth In Golf Earnings

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (UPI)—Billy Casper, winning his first tournament in 14 months, moved into the eighth spot on the Professional Golfers' Association money-winning list.

Casper, in capturing the Kaiser International first prize of $30,000, has now earned $107,328 for the year. The battle for top spot continued, with Lee Trevino duking it out on Jack Nicklaus. Trevino picked up $2,250 in the Kaiser and now trails Nicklaus by $7,611. Jack has won $207,080; Trevino has banked $189,468. Arnold Palmer is third with $194,937.

Bucks Win 7th in Row, Stay Undefeated

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 27 (AP)—The Milwaukee Bucks, led by Bob Danridge with 27 points and Kareem Jabbar with 24, boosted their National Basketball Association win-loss record to 7-0 last night by outclassing the Baltimore Bullets, 120-90.

The champion Bucks trailed the Bullets, an 8-2 lead, then pulverized them, Archie Clark, whose suspension for jumping the team was lifted Monday, scored 18 points in his first game for Baltimore. But the Bullets were without suspended Earl Monroe, and John Tresvant, starting for injured Gus Johnson, was also injured early in the game.

A basket awarded to Mike Newlin for goal-tending by Bob Lanier with four seconds to go enabled Houston to nip Detroit, 104-103, for its first victory.

Knicks 106, Celtics 101. Dave DeBusschere and Walt Frazier each scored 22 points in leading the New York Knicks to a 104-101 victory over Boston to snap the Celtics' four-game winning streak.

Braves 51, Warriors 89. Bob Kauffman scored 24 points in powering Buffalo to a 91-89 victory over the Golden State Warriors.

Bulls 125, Trail Blazers 111. Chicago scored 70 points in the first half and ended up with a 123-111 victory over Portland.

Suns 120, Royals 99. Phoenix, hitting 58 percent of its field-goal attempts, ran past Cincinnati, 126-99. Paul Silas led the Suns' balanced scoring with 28 points, including nine of 12 from the floor and eight of 10 free throws.

Redskins Get Giants' McNeil

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (UPI)—The Washington Redskins, one of the National Football League leaders in player deals, made another trade yesterday. They acquired Clifton McNeil, wide receiver, from the Giants and gave up two 1972 draft choices and Richmond Flowers.

The 6-foot-2-inch, 187-pound McNeil, with eight years of pro experience, is 30, just the right age for George Allen, the dynamic, first-year Washington coach. Allen has apparently built a winner in the capital by giving away draft choices for what other teams consider antiquities. The Redskins have a 5-1 win-loss record this year and lead the Eastern Division of the National Conference.

"The future is now" is said to be Allen's philosophy, and it seems to work for him.

The reason for the trade was to help fill the spot vacated by Charlie Taylor, the Redskins' star receiver, who broke an ankle

Blue Tops Lolich In Cy Young Voting

By Joseph Durso

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (NYT)—Vida Blue was named the winner of the Cy Young Award yesterday as the best pitcher in the American League and became the youngest player in baseball history to be elected.

The 22-year-old left-hander for the Oakland Athletics outscored Mickey Lolich of the Detroit Tigers and Wilbur Wood of the Chicago White Sox in the voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. He did not achieve a clean sweep, getting 14 of the 24 first-place votes cast by the writers' committee while Lolich got nine and Wood one. But he was the only pitcher named on all the ballots and he accumulated enough second and third-place votes to finish with 88 points to 85 for Lolich.

Wood, a knuckleball pitcher, was third with 23 points, and then came Dave McNally of the Baltimore Orioles, Dick Drago of the Kansas City Royals and Andy Messersmith of the California Angels.

For Blue, the award was the first of many he will probably receive this winter as the sensation of the baseball season. It was his first full summer in the major leagues after two spells of September pitching in the two previous years, and he started it with a stunning series of performances.

By mid-July he had built a record of 17 victories and only three defeats with six shutouts and the honor of starting the All-Star game for the American League. He was pitching very fourth day, though, and tired after that, with a 7-5 won-lost record over the final two months.

By the end of the season, the Oakland team had run away with the league's Western championship and the hard-throwing youngster from Mansfield, La., had compiled this record: 24 victories, 8 defeats, 8 shutouts, 24 complete games, 301 strikeouts and an earned-run average of 1.82.

Lolich Finishes Strong
Meanwhile, Lolich, 31, went into the second half with a 14-6 mark and then came on strong down the stretch. He finished with 25 victories, the most in the majors; 14 defeats, 29 complete games, 308 strikeouts and an earned-run average of 2.92.

They had two things in common: Both are left-handers and both are workhorses. Blue started 39 of Oakland's 162 games, Lolich 45 of Detroit's. The No. 3 man in the poll, Wood, is a former relief pitcher who won 23 games, lost 18 and was second to Blue with seven shutouts and a 1.91 earned-run average.

"The youngest man to win the award before Blue," Dean Chance of the Angels in 1964 at the age of 23.

The committee consists of two writers from each of the 12 cities in the league. A similar award for the National League will be announced next week.

The votes are cast before the playoffs and World Series.

Rondon Keeps His WBA Title, Stops Brennan

From Wire Dispatches

MIAMI BEACH, Oct. 27.—Violette Rondon of Venezuela successfully defended his World Boxing Association light-heavyweight title last night with a 13th-round knockout of Gomeo Brennan of the Bahamas.

Rondon dominated the last five rounds and referee Eddie Eckers stopped the scheduled 15-round bout before the 13th round started. The Miami Boxing Commission doctor had examined the closed left eye of Brennan between rounds. The eye had been pounded shut with a relentless barrage of hooks and chops.

It was Rondon's third title defense since he won the WBA title Feb. 27 after Bob Foster of Silver Spring, Md., was stripped of his crown for inactivity.

Brennan, twice British Empire middleweight titleholder, scored with an overhand right through the middle rounds.

His best round was the seventh, when he came out swinging and had Rondon groggy with several left-right combinations to the head.

Rondon, 6 feet 2 inches, 175 pounds, came back strong in the eighth, however, and wore down his smaller opponent with ceaseless attack in which he battered Brennan, 5-11, 167 1/2, almost at will with short right uppercuts and left hooks.

All three judges had the Venezuelan ahead when the fight was stopped. Bob Eisenman and Bunny Lovett had it 56-52 and Jesus Cells scored it 57-54.

Rondon said he will meet Carlos Monzon in a nontitle fight Nov. 20 in Buenos Aires.

"I will next defend the championship in Berlin," Rondon said. "But we don't know yet who I will be fighting."

The Scoreboard

HORSE SHOW—At Washington, scoring the second spot of the Washington International, youthful Eleanor MacCowan of Canada, joined Argentina's Jorge Lambi in back-to-back defeats of the world's finest international open class. It took three jumps before the 20-year-old Scottish-born Canadian gained the Congresswoman's Trophy in the pulsance event with a clean jump over the 9-foot spread and then a mighty jump over the wall which stood at 9 feet 8 inches left in the wake of Miss MacCowan and Hombro, carrying the colors of the Canadian National Team, was Roderick Jenkins and life Dier, winners of this event two years ago.
